Hunting Clothes for Women

By Keli Van Cleave

South Dakota Late Season Success

Sub zero temperatures, snow, and high winds were the biggest challenges for a successful late season South Dakota pheasant deer combo hunt.

Hi, I'm Jane Keller Pheasant Phun hunting guide. I recently enjoyed the opportunity to team up with Keli Van Cleave from PinkOutdoors.com and my daughter Kasen for some hunting at Pheasant Phun Inc. located in north central South Dakota near Hitchcock. This happens to be my dearest and most familiar hunting grounds. It is where my love for the outdoors started. At a very early age, I spent every spare minute with my father Art Olsen, an avid sportsman and outdoor enthusiast. Our whole family hunted as I was growing up. It is a tradition that I am proud to share with my children.

Up at 3:30 AM this ALL GIRL hunt was officially underway with a ride in Mean Green, our 6x6 retired military truck. Team huntress prepared for the field with lip-stick and all.

We saw a big herd of deer totaling over 80 head, with at least 3 bucks that would surely score 180 plus, what a sight!! With above normal snow fall and below normal temps for late December, these deer were bunched up, skittish, and oh so smart. It was going to take all the girl power we had to make things happen our way.

Mid morning we left the field for some well earned time by the fireplace. Shifting into pheasant hunting mode, we gathered our gear and planned our attack. Dave Olsen, my brother, gave us the safety rules followed by a short prayer. Setting out just behind the Pheasant Phun Bunkhouse, Team Huntress saw action in the first 100 yards. Nothing takes your breath away faster than the sound of pheasants taking to flight with a quick cackle and the whisking flutter of wings lifting them from their protective cover. The birds boiled out of the food plots and cattails, like popcorn coming out of the popper.

Overall, our first ALL GIRL hunt was a huge success, we harvested two bucks, our limit of wild ringneck pheasants, and no matter how full our game bag, the time spent together outdoors was priceless. World class hunting at its finest! Keli was amazed, stalking up on such large herds of deer and seeing more birds on one drive than some hunters see in a lifetime. The ongoing conservation practices and habitat management at the ranch makes Pheasantphun.com the hunters honey hole for all game.

We are launching www.TeamHuntress.com to empower women outdoors. Please check in for our Team Huntress Camp June 12-14, 2009 and your chance to become a TEAM HUNTRESS MEMBER.
